electronic Proof of Delivery

Effective use of PDA technology

Using PDA's on a GPRS network, customers will be able to sign for deliveries on hand held PDA screens.

With the signed documents updating the central system, this information is immediately available for proof of delivery.

This system greatly reduces the current flow of paperwork from the warehouse to the customer's location and back again for filing.

Staffing time to retrieve files and answer queries is minimal, as all PoD documents can be stored centrally for queries from any location.

With central storage, the possibility of introducing a secure internet portal for customers to view their own PoD's is again a reality and provides further staff savings.
